

What Services Should You Use To Aid Your Career Journey?

CommPRO Editorial Staff

Beginning your career can be a daunting task, especially if you're not sure what you want to do or where you want to end up. It can take a while to finalize your thoughts and truly begin; this is where many people get overwhelmed by the stress of starting a career.

But unsurprisingly, there are a few ways to make the journey a bit easier on yourself. A variety of services have been created specifically for those who want to ease into their career or switch careers entirely.

In this article, we'll introduce eight different services that can help with different aspects of your career journey. Use them all or just a few, depending on what you need at each stage of your journey.

1) Resume writing services

If you're applying for jobs, you're going to need a resume. And not just any resume, but a resume that will grab the attention of your potential employer and help you stand out from the competition.

If you're not sure how to write a resume or what information to include, there are plenty of resume writing services that can help. They will work with you one-on-one to understand your experience and goals, and then craft a resume that will get you noticed. For example, Arielle Executive can help you create a resume tailored to your specific needs and goals.

To begin with a resuming writing service, you can start with a simple Google search.

2) Career coaching

If you're struggling to figure out what you want to do with your life, career coaching may be a good option for you. Career coaches are trained professionals who can help you assess your skills, values, and interests, and then match them to potential career options.

Coaching can take place in person, over the phone, or even via video chat. It's a great way to get unbiased advice and support as you figure out your next steps.

3) Online courses

If you're looking to make a career change, you may need to update your skillset. Luckily, there are now many online courses available that can help you learn new skills in a flexible and affordable way.

Some online courses even offer certification, which can be helpful when applying for jobs. When choosing a course, be sure to check the reviews and make sure it's reputable.

You can filter these courses by subject, price, and duration to find the perfect fit for you. If you're not sure where to start, try Skillshare or Udemy.

4) Networking events

Networking is a great way to meet new people in your industry and learn about new opportunities. There are many networking events happening all the time, and you can usually find them through a simple Google search.

If you're not sure how to network, there are plenty of resources available to help. For example, the book Never Eat Alone by Keith Ferrazzi is a great resource that can teach you how to network effectively.

You should also remember how to conduct yourself at a networking event. This means dressing appropriately, being polite and respectful, and having a good elevator pitch ready.

5) LinkedIn

LinkedIn is a social networking site specifically for professionals. It's a great way to connect with other professionals in your industry, learn about new opportunities, and showcase your skills and experience.

You can use LinkedIn to find jobs, research companies, and connect with potential employers. You can also use it to build your personal brand and grow your network.

If you're not sure how to use LinkedIn, there are plenty of resources available to help you get started. For example, the book The Power Formula for LinkedIn Success by Wayne Breitbarth can teach you how to use LinkedIn to grow your career.

6) Job boards

Job boards are websites where companies post job openings. They're a great way to see what kinds of jobs are out there and see if any of them match your skills and interests.

There are many different job boards, and you can usually find them through a simple Google search. Some popular job boards include Indeed, Monster, and Glassdoor.

7) Recruiters

Recruiters are professionals who help companies find employees. They can be a great way to find jobs that match your skills and interests.

Recruiters usually have a network of contacts in different industries, so they can help you connect with potential employers. They can also help you prepare for interviews and negotiate salaries.

If you're interested in working with a recruiter, you can usually find them through a simple Google search. You can also find recruiters through LinkedIn.

8) Social media

Social media is a great way to connect with other professionals, learn about new opportunities, and showcase your skills and experience. It's also a great way to build your personal brand.

There are many different social media platforms, and you can usually find them through a simple Google search. Some popular social media platforms include LinkedIn, Twitter, and Facebook.

9) Professional associations

Professional associations are organizations that bring together professionals in a particular industry. They're a great way to connect with other professionals, learn about new opportunities, and stay up-to-date on industry news.

There are many different professional associations, and you can usually find them through a simple Google search. Some popular professional associations include the American Marketing Association and the National Association of Realtors.

10) Career fairs

Career fairs are events where companies come together to meet potential employees. They're a great way to learn about different companies, explore different job options, and connect with potential employers.

There are many different career fairs, and you can usually find them through a simple Google search. Some popular career fairs include the CareerBuilder Job Fair and the National Career Fairs.

Conclusion

There are many different services that can help you with your career journey. Use them all or just a few, depending on what you need at each stage of your journey.

We hope this article has been helpful. Good luck with your career journey!